A GUIDE TO REFERENCE SOURCES

This selected guide to sources of information on South Asia covers Afghanistan, Bangladesh, India, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka.

Most of the material dealing with this region is housed in the Humanities and Social Sciences (McLennan-Redpath) Library. However, material dealing with Buddhism, comparative religion and Hinduism, (including Hindu philosophy) are collected by the Religious Studies Library while material relating to Islam, Indian Muslims and medieval Indian history and culture are largely found in the Islamic Studies Library. Both the Religious Studies and Islamic Studies Libraries contain a selection of publications in Arabic, Sanskrit, Urdu and Hindi languages. The Government Documents Department has resources rich in information on this topic published by international bodies such as United Nations, UNCTAD, World Bank and by the government bodies of the countries of the region.

Through a special acquisitions programme via the Shastri-Indo-Canadian Institute, the McGill University Libraries have been receiving English language materials from India for nearly two decades. More selective acquisitions of publications in English from and about other countries of the region has been maintained.

Materials housed in the McLennan-Redpath Library can be accessed via MUSE. To consult earlier works received by the Islamic Studies Library and Religious Studies Library, it is necessary to consult the card catalogue and microfiche catalogues of those libraries.

The material listed under Part I; Reference Sources, and Part III; Subject Bibliography, may cover individual countries or the region as a whole, while Part II; Bibliography, is more specific with respect to individual countries.

Other bibliographic guides prepared by the Reference Department and available at the Reference Desk in the McLennan building may also prove helpful. There are guides covering Anthropology, Economics, Political Science, Sociology and Comparative Literature.

All locations of items cited have not been indicated. For additional locations, consult MUSE. A reference librarian will be pleased to help you if you require any assistance in using the works listed in this guide or in locating the materials you wish to consult in the McGill Library collections. Please inquire at the Reference Desk.

This guide was compiled by Syed Naseer, edited by Suzy Slavin, Reference Department, McLennan Library.
